Report by: ScoutBridge Scouting Department, Gabriel Sales

Dominik Wilusz is a left-footed defender with a versatile profile and a strong inclination to participate actively in the build-up phase. He shows good intelligence in possession, often attracting pressure deliberately in order to disrupt the opposition's first defensive line through body orientation, movement, and well-timed line-breaking passes. He is a confident and involved player who actively seeks the ball, showing comfort and security when operating under pressure rather than avoiding responsibility in early phases of construction.

With the ball, Dominik demonstrates composure and technical reliability, particularly in short and medium distribution. His willingness to receive and circulate possession helps his team maintain structure and progress play in a controlled manner. He does not shy away from taking part in build-up sequences and shows confidence in his technical execution. At times, however, his scanning and awareness of surroundings can be inconsistent, leading to moments where decision-making speed could be improved. This appears more related to development and coaching than to technical limitation.

From a tactical perspective, his versatility stands out. He shows the capacity to operate as a left centre-back, especially in a back three, where his left foot and comfort in possession allow him to step into midfield zones during build-up. He also profiles as a potential left back or ball-winning midfielder, given his involvement, physical presence, and willingness to engage in duels. Defensively, there is clear potential, but he would benefit from structured coaching to refine positioning, defensive timing, and consistency in reading situations without the ball.

Physically, Dominik presents a strong and competitive profile for his age. At 1.80 m and 82 kg, he combines good strength with a solid frame, allowing him to compete effectively in duels. His physical presence supports his ability to play across multiple positions, particularly in roles that require both defensive engagement and ball involvement. Continued physical development should further enhance his effectiveness in senior environments.

Mentally, he shows positive traits in terms of confidence and mentality. He is not a passive player and consistently looks to be involved in the game, reflecting self-belief and ambition. His desire to have the ball and influence play suggests a mindset suited to development in possession-oriented roles. With the guidance of a coach who understands his profile and provides clear tactical structure, these mental traits can be channelled more efficiently.

Overall, Dominik Wilusz presents a solid developmental profile with clear upside, but his progression should remain gradual and well-structured. At his current stage, he would be best suited to Swedish Division 5 senior contexts, structured U19/U21 environments, or comparable levels such as the Portuguese 6th tier (district leagues) or Finnish Kolmonen, where the emphasis is on physical adaptation, defensive education, and decision-making. These levels provide an appropriate platform to refine his defensive consistency and scanning habits while gradually bridging the gap toward higher-intensity senior football.
