Report by: ScoutBridge Scouting Department, Gabriel Sales

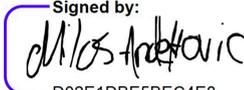

Oskar Gustafsson is a highly effective and decisive winger who consistently poses a threat in 1v1 situations. He shows clear confidence when facing defenders and demonstrates strong attacking instincts, using both dribbling and intelligent movement to destabilise defensive lines. His ability to beat opponents directly, combined with good timing and execution, makes him particularly dangerous in wide areas. He is comfortable receiving the ball in isolation and regularly looks to take responsibility in offensive situations.

Technically, he displays a well-rounded attacking skill set. Gustafsson is capable of cutting inside to combine with teammates, finding line-breaking passes, or taking shots from the edge of the box when space opens up. He is equally effective when driving towards the byline, delivering crosses with intent and accuracy. Despite not being physically imposing in terms of height, he holds his ground very well against bigger defenders, using balance, timing, and intelligent body positioning to protect the ball and maintain advantage in duels. His versatility on the wing allows him to adapt his decisions to the situation rather than relying on a single attacking pattern, making him difficult to predict and defend against.

From a tactical perspective, he shows strong positional habits for his role. He consistently keeps the pitch wide, stretching defensive blocks and creating space for teammates in central areas. In transition moments, he positions himself close to the offside line to pin defenders back and maximise depth, pushing the defensive line to its limits. Despite his strong desire to be involved, he is not a greedy player; when the best option is to pass, he releases the ball quickly and contributes positively to collective play, functioning as a key element within the team's attacking structure.

Without the ball, there are areas for development. Gustafsson can be somewhat permissive defensively, particularly in terms of pressing intensity and consistency in defensive actions. Increasing his engagement off the ball, especially in pressing moments, would help disrupt opposition build-up earlier and allow the team to defend in more advantageous situations.

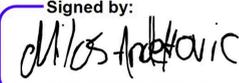

One of the most notable aspects of his profile is his mentality. At times, he may appear less involved during certain phases of the game, but this should not be mistaken for disengagement. He has the ability to produce decisive actions suddenly, changing the rhythm of a match with a single movement, pass, or dribble. Importantly, regardless of mistakes or unsuccessful actions, he consistently asks for the ball and remains confident in his ability. This resilience and self-belief are increasingly rare qualities in young players and reflect strong character and competitive mentality.

Overall, Oskar Gustafsson presents the profile of a high-upside attacking player who is currently performing above the level of his competitive environment. His technical quality, confidence in 1v1 situations, tactical understanding of wide play, physical balance against stronger opponents, and mental resilience suggest he is well suited to a step up either in league level or age category. Given his background in elite youth football and prior senior exposure, he represents a strong option to integrate into an Ettan squad as a developmental youngster, while also projecting as an immediate impact player in Swedish Division 3. Alternatively, he would be a valuable addition to a top level U19 environment, where his profile could stand out against high-quality opposition and accelerate his progression.
